15 Rounds

Shooters need to start in a field interview stance/bladed. On command shooters will draw their weapon, throw a distraction object (ticket book/ammo box) at the face of the target/violator while taking 1 large step back (shooters may go to an isosceles stance) and fire 5 rounds then go to the high ready and on command holster their weapon. The shooter can fire with one or both hands. If the shooter fires with one hand the non-shooting shooting hand and forearm will be held up to shield the shooters head and face. Shooters will fire this drill twice; the second time using a hand strike, scan and go to the low ready. Shooters will follow range commands to fire either 2 or 3 rounds when necessary. After each command to fire shooters will scan the threat area until cleared and return to the low ready until given the command to holster.

10 Rounds

5 Rounds Kneeling, using barricade for cover and support. 5 Rounds Standing, using the barricade for cover and support. Shooters will load 10 rounds into a magazine with either an empty hull or a dummy round mixed in to cause a jam or malfunction.

NOTE: Range officers will not use the command “he/she’s got a gun/weapon” for a firing command. This could condition officers to fire when the gun/weapon was not a threat. At the 7 and 1 yard line range officers will occasionally give nonfiring commands (he/she dropped the gun/weapon, he/she’s got his/her hands up) to prevent an automatic fire response when officers hear a command.
